Consumer rights sound like it would be a given in America, but it wasn't until the 1960's that the government first acted to protect consumers. It started with the Consumer Credit Protection Act of 1968, when Congress moved to shield consumers and their financial records from abuse. In the years following, other laws refined consumer rights, spelling out how the government can access bank customers' information, how banks treat borrowers and the way banks handle customer deposits.
