There are differing opinions on whether accessing state in action creators is a good idea: Redux creator Dan Abramov feels that it should be limited: "The few use cases where I think it's acceptable is for checking cached data before you make a request, or for checking whether you are authenticated (in other words, doing a conditional dispatch).

Javascript - Accessing Redux state in an action creator ...

Redux in Action is an accessible guide to effectively managing state in web applications. Built around common use cases, this practical book starts with a simple task-management application built in React. You'll use the app to learn the Redux workflow, handle asynchronous actions, and get your hands on the Redux developer tools.

In React, mutable state is typically kept in the state property of components, and only updated with setState (). We can combine the two by making the React state be the "single source of truth". Then the React component that renders a form also controls what happens in that form on subsequent user input.
